BETWEEN ACkommodation AND REVIVALISM:

Muslims, the State, and Society in Ghana
from the Precolonial to the Postcolonial Era
Between Accommodation and Revivalism:
Muslims, the State, and Society in Ghana
from the Precolonial to the Postcolonial Era

Holger Weiss
CONTENTS

Preface 9

List of Maps, Tables and Illustrations 11

A Note on Orthography and Translation 13

Chapter One: The ‘Northern Factor’ in Ghanaian Historiography 15

1. Introduction 15
2. An Outline of the ‘Northern Factor’ 21
3. Sources for Historical Research on Islam and Muslims 25
3.1. Muslim and Non-Muslim Indigenous Sources 26
3.2. European Written Accounts and Archival Sources 29
3.4. Academic Writing on the ‘Northern Factor’ 34

Chapter Two: Processes of Islamization in the Voltaic Basin 43

1. Juula (Mande) Traders-cum-Scholars and Wangara Networks 45
1.1. The North-South Axis: Bighu and Buna 51
1.2. Merchant-Scholarly Communities and the Suwarian Tradition 56
2. The State, the Chiefs and the Scholars 62
2.1. The Mande/Mossi Factor and the ‘First Kingdom’ of Dagbon 64
2.2. The Gonja [Gbanya] Factor 70
2.3. The ‘Second Kingdom’ of Dagbon and the Conversion of Na Zangina 75
2.4. Wa and the Three ‘Tribes’ 84
2.5. Mampurugu: Rulers, Muslims and Larger Politics 89
3. The Hausa Factor and Beyond 97
3.1. The East-West Axis: Salaga and Beyond 108
3.2. The Zabarima: Warlords, Enslavers and the ‘End of Time’ 121
4. Muslims and Rulers in the Late Precolonial Voltaic Basin 134

Chapter Three: Early Images of Islam in Dagbon 143

1. Introduction 143
2. Rumours about a Muslim Kingdom in the Hinterland 144
2.1. Not a Muslim Kingdom 148
2.2. Muslim or Not? 150
3. Muslim Reactions to European Penetration: the Case of Dagbon 155
3.1. Muslims in German Togoland 165
4. Saving Souls and Rejecting the False Prophet 168
4.1. The German Colonial Government and the Ghost of Mahdism 171
Chapter Four: The Colonial State and Muslims in the North

1. Introduction
   1.1. Imagined Development in the Northern Territories
2. Colonial Attitudes towards Islam in West Africa
   2.1. Watherston’s Positive Approach
   2.2. Early Colonial Investigations and the Critique of Watherston’s Model
   2.3. Fearing ‘Fanatics’ and a ‘Mohammedan Crusade’
   2.4. Changing Perceptions: the Criticism of Colonial Policy before WWI
3. The Formation of Colonial and Muslim Spheres
   3.1. British Attempts to Identify Muslim Centres
   3.2. British Colonial Censuses from 1911 to 1931
   3.3. Colonial Needs for Administrative Personnel
   3.4. The Fate of Muslim Education
   3.5. Muslim or Not: Changing Representations

Chapter Five: Muslims within the Colonial State

1. The Formalization of Zongos in the Northern Territories
   1.1. Zongos and ‘Alien’ Communities in the North
2. Marking a ‘Muslim Sphere’ within the Colonial Space
   2.1. Colonial Intervention: The Hajj, the Mosque and Shari’a
3. Internal Developments
   3.1. The Ahmadiyya and the Schism in Wa
4. Towards the Postcolonial Discourse
   4.1. Muslim Education Re-enters the Stage
   4.2. Visible Signs of Friction within the Muslim Community
   4.3. Muslims and Politics
5. Concluding Reflections

Chapter Six: Muslims and Politics: Marginalization or Visibility?

1. From Colonial Gold Coast to Postcolonial Ghana
   1.1. The North in Postcolonial Ghanaian Politics
2. Muslim Political Activity from the Colonial to the Present Period
3. The Muslim Community, the Civil Society and the Secular State
   3.1. Undercounting Muslims? Contesting the 2000 Census Results
   3.2. The ‘Islamic Factor’ in Ghanaian Civil Society
4. The Religious Factor in Ghanaian Society
   4.1. Potential Inter-religions Conflicts
4.2. The Northern Conflicts and the Religious Factor 375
4.3. Intra-Muslim Clashes 382
5. Muslims in Contemporary Ghana: Towards an Assessment 391

Bibliography 395
Appendix I 423
Appendix II 425
Index 427