

NAMPŪTIRI JAIMINĪYA: CHANT ANALYSES

The Analytical Apparatus

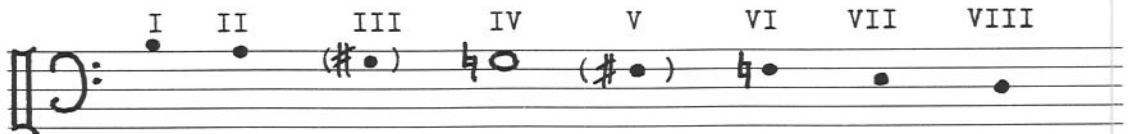

Jaiminīya Sāmaveda is extant only among a very few Tamil-speaking Aiyar and Aiyāṅkār brahmans of Tamilnāṭu and Kēraḷa and among an even smaller number of Malayāḷam-speaking Nampūtiri brahmans of Kēraḷa. During my 1971 visits to various J centers, I found the strongest Tamil traditions at Śrīraṅgam (Tiruccirāppallī District, Tamilnāṭu), Tentiruppērai (Tirunelvēli District, Tamilnāṭu), and Koṭuntirappuḷḷi (Pāḷakkāṭu District, Kēraḷa). The highest concentration of Nampūtiri singers was at Pāññāl (Trīśśivapērūr District, Kēraḷa), where the tradition was being maintained principally by Muṭṭattukkāṭṭu Iṭṭi Ravi Nampūtiri and his pupils.

A major conclusion of my Sāmavedic Chant was the apparent adherence of Nampūtiri Sāmaveda to the J notation. This finding was astonishing for two reasons: (1) the Nampūtiris preserve a strictly oral tradition that makes no use of any notation whatsoever, and (2) Nampūtiri Sāmaveda is truer to the notation than the chants of the Tamil brahmans, the ones who today employ the notation. Compared to the complexity of NJ, the Tamil productions are rather redundant (see SC 172-99). Although a tentative relationship of NJ to four notational signs (t, t, c, kh) was given in SC 218-19, it was pointed out that some signs have several interpretations, that the sequence of notational symbols in a vacana possibly affects the musical realization of a given sign, and that further research in the area is mandatory before solid conclusions can be drawn (SC 219). The present study seeks to unravel these and other mysteries of the world's oldest music notation.

A method for analyzing NJ was introduced in SC 202-8 and subsequently utilized in MNUC and SARN. It is a system designed, on the one hand, to reflect the pervasive motivic organization of the chant and, on the other hand, to take into account every tone heard in a given performance. It is not likely that the Nampūtiris think of their ornate sāmans in terms of these short pitch patterns; nevertheless, the configurations are the inevitable results of continuous melodic fluctuation (Malayālam: iḷakkam) invoked by sweeping hand movements (Malayālam: kai-kāṭṭuka). If the NJ tone material is represented by Roman numerals I-VIII, the vacillation can be said to involve mainly the major second (II) above a central pitch (IV) and either the major second, minor third, or perfect fourth (VI, VII, or VIII) below this pivotal tone. Most motives conclude on IV, some end with II, and a few come to rest on VI or V (a minor second below IV). Tone I, a major third above IV, occurs only before terminal II. Tone III (a minor second above IV) is rare and relatively unimportant. Presented here are the six non-motivic tones (I-VIII: pitches are relative) and the motives derived from them. The patterns are labeled according to number of tones: 4c, for example, indicates a particular four-tone motive; 5b designates a configuration with five pitches; and so on.

Tone Material of Nampūtiri Sāmaveda

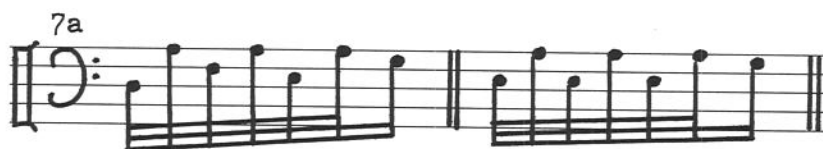

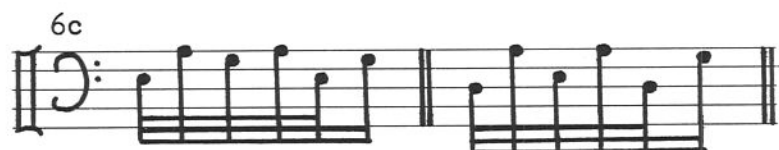

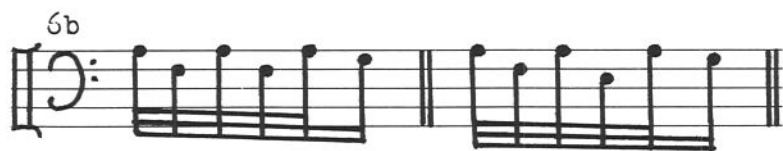

Final tones of motives and single pitches vary in duration. In SC 209-19 I chose to present only the bare motives and to ignore lengths of tones separating one motive from another. However, in MNUC and SARN I have used a plus sign to denote extension by the duration of a sixteenth note. For instance, 3d implies a certain three-tone motive ending with a sixteenth note (preceding tones are generally represented by thirty-second notes); but 3d+ ends with an eighth note, 3d++ with a dotted eighth, 3d+++ with a quarter note, and so on. Since the metronomic setting for an eighth note of NJ is approximately 116, a sixteenth note lasts .259 second. Therefore, a plus sign increases the duration of the final tone of a motive or single pitch by about one-quarter second. Fractions between fourths of a second are not taken into account. These temporal intervals are easily obtained through use of a stopwatch. Although one may argue the necessity of being this accurate in time measurement, it should be pointed out that the motives are often organized in groups; hence the plus signs enable the reader to discern one group from another and consequently to determine the notational symbol that calls for that particular arrangement. Two or more musical phrases might be identical as far as the motivic series is concerned, but the internal grouping may assign the phrases to entirely different contexts.

The analyses which follow show the division of a motive among two or more syllables of text by means of numbers in parentheses. For example, 8b(1-2)(3-8) indicates that the first two tones of motive 8b belong to one syllable, the third through eighth tones to the syllable immediately following. A dash signifies repetition of the preceding tone; an asterisk marks spots where breath is taken.

It is strongly recommended that the reader memorize the motives so that he or she will be able to recognize variations on a particular pattern. For instance, those motives ending on tone II (the major second above the central pitch) are often interchangeable: 3e may be replaced by 1b, 2b, 4a, 5b, and so on. Also, the chanters have a tendency to split a motive into two or more parts or to combine two or more motives into a compound motive. Some common derivatives are listed here.

4a: 2b2b

4c: 1b3b, 3e3b, 4a3b, 5b3b, 2h4a3b, 3f4a3b

4e: 2a2a

5b: 1b4a

6a: 2b2b2b

6b: 3e3b, 1b5a

6c: 3b3d, 2b2b2a

6d: 2a2a2a

8b: 5b3b, 3e5a

4c3d: 7c

On the other hand, some motives are simply replaced by similar motives. For the common 4c pattern is often substituted 3b or 3d; 8b is occasionally shortened to 6b; and so forth.

Chant Notations and Interpretations

Before NJ can be related to the J notation, an analysis of a sizable number of sāmans is essential. I have settled upon the first seventy-nine chants of the JGG, which draw their texts--presented here without accentuation, which is not relevant to this study--from the first forty-five rks of the JS (see Caland 37-38, Raghu Vira 3-5).

Seventy-nine chants were chosen for the reason that, apart from the sāmans duplicated in SC 157-62, this was the number available to me from the important manuscript, cited hereafter as KT, copied for Prof. Asko Parpola (Helsinki) by Śrī K. N. Sahasranāma Aiyar of Koṭuntirappuḷḷi. I wish to thank both of these gentlemen for sharing with me portions of KT, which contains the JGG and JĀrG in Malayālam script, along with the J notation in grantha. Other J sources consulted include B.61, a grantha palm leaf manuscript of the JGG from the Burnell collection of the India Office Library (London), and B.497, a grantha paper manuscript of the JGG and JĀrG from the same collection. The notation of B.497 has been taken from Caland Manuscript 7 of the University of Utrecht Library, a large notebook which collates B.497 with B.61 and (for the JĀrG) B.62. My personal examination of B.61 has produced readings which do not always coincide with those of Caland.

Notations of these three manuscripts are aligned above the appropriate syllables of the J text, which is based upon actual NJ chanting and not upon any particular manuscript. Below the J text is the corresponding K-R text, which is taken from N. The K-R numeral notation below this is the result of comparing the N version with those of three India Office grantha manuscripts: B.60a and B.89, both of which employ the R syllable notation, and B.188a, which utilizes the numeral notation. K-R variants are related to the appropriate K-R vacana at the end of each sāman, before the musical analysis of the chant.

These analyses are based upon taped recitals of Śrī Muṭṭattukkāṭṭu Iṭṭi Ravi Nampūtiri (I.R.N.) and Śrī Tōṭṭam Śaṅkaranāraṇayan Nampūtiri (Ś.N.N.), who traveled to Tirupati (in early 1971?) and sang the entire JGG and JĀrG for Prof. E. R. Sreekrishna Sarma. Prof. Sarma has very kindly supplied me with copies of the first eighty-nine chants of the JGG. The seventy-nine sāmans under study here were sung according to this schedule:

- 1-5: I.R.N. and Ś.N.N.
 6: Ś.N.N.
 7-19: I.R.N.
 20-22: Ś.N.N.
 23-30: I.R.N.
 31-34: Ś.N.N.
 35: I.R.N.
 36-40: Ś.N.N.
 41-42: I.R.N.
 43-55: Ś.N.N.
 56-59: I.R.N.
 60-73: Ś.N.N.
 74-77: I.R.N.
 78-79: Ś.N.N.

The reader should be aware that the first five chants are somewhat more protracted than the remaining sāmans due to the fact that here the two sāmavedīs sing simultaneously.

Chant names are those given by the JĀrṣB, with the corrections listed by Caland in JS 21. The bracketed number at the beginning of each NJ vacana is the number of the first textual syllable of that section. In the musical analyses, however, every fifth syllable has the appropriate number placed above.
